Cool Kids' Playhouse

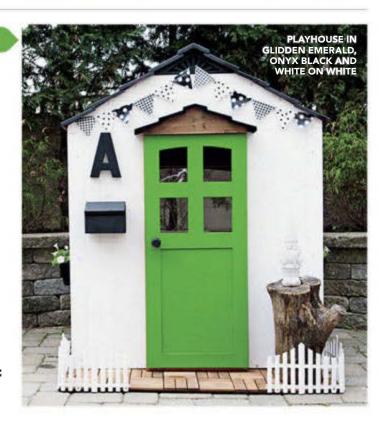

A little bit of paint and a grown-up color scheme can totally transform a look without transform a look withou taking away from its intended function. Here, a plain playhouse was transformed using Glidden exterior paint in a color palette of black and

Because Glidden's exterior paint protects from sun and weather damage and prevents mildew, the paint will actually extend the life of the playhouse.

DRESSER IN GLIDDEN POWDER PINK

Awesome Antique Dresser

With a coat of high-gloss pink paint, a vintage dresser becomes new again. Pale colors look especially lovely on antique furniture pieces, bringing out their architectural lines and providing a nice counterpoint to the iron and brass hardware that's often found on older items.

Even with an all pink color palette, this little girl's room looks fresh and modern through unique styling. Old meets new when this pretty piece is decorated with cool kids' toys and accessories.

Why Skylights? Because Everything Under The Sun Looks Better.

If you've ever been dazzled by the colors outside on a sunny spring day, then you know the power of natural light from above. It makes the sky a vibrant, infinite blue. Flowers reveal themselves in all their jeweled tones: creamy white, magenta, mandarin orange and deep red. Tree leaves seem to shimmer green against the sky.

Inside your home, you choose colors that reflect your personal style, interests and the vibe you want to create in each room. Whether it's a tonal palette with accents of color or a space awash in bold hues, it all would be for naught if your lighting makes pastels appear peaked, dark tones disappear in the shadows or intricate patterns feel disconnected.

Natural light from above—whether it's outside or inside from skylights installed in your home—reveals true colors of fabrics, furniture finishes and paint like no other type of light. That's why skylights are the optimal lighting choice to showcase your home décor.

THE NO LEAK SKYLIGHT No Leak Promise No Wherina

Because VELUX No Leak Solar Powered "Fresh Air" Skylights provide light from above, rather than from the side like vertical windows do, the light is balanced throughout the day, reaching into the furthest corners of a room for even, natural light.

VELUX skylights feature LoE3 argon-injected, double-paned glazing that is energy-efficient and protects against fade-causing UV rays. With fresh air models, open the skylights to take advantage of natural air flow created by the chimney effect: warm, moist air naturally rises and escapes from the skylights, while fresh air is pulled in through open windows.

Add remote-controlled blinds to block, darken or filter the light depending on the time of day or activity in the room. Choose from more than 65 colors to complement the room's décor.

Skylights are the simple solution for showing off your home décor. So if you spent months combing through fabric samples to find the perfect accent pillow color palette—the one that perfectly evokes the turquoise water, royal blue fish and sapphire sky from last year's Caribbean vacation—rest assured that adding natural light from above into the mix will guarantee every color rings true.

Other companies' claims can take months to surface, which can leave some folks waitin' around like they're crusty, old timey prospectors. But you're no prospector who's totally desperate, with an unruly mule and a mouth untouched by modern dentistry. dear HGTV magazine,

Readers tell us what they think and share photos of their own projects.

The Clasen home in Newport

Beach, CA (March's "A Cool Idea in Every Room"), is hands down the best home you have ever featured. Dark gray walls! An Eames recliner! White oak kitchen cabinets! A bocce court! Every photo was a visual treat. I'd love to see more homes like this one.

-Molly Goldthwait, Buffalo, NY

For years I had been wanting a ship chandelier to hang in my bathroom, but I couldn't find one that was the right size—or price. That's why I was so excited to see the one from PB Teen in your March issue ("The High/Low List"). I ordered it immediately.

-Birgitt van Wijk, Houston, TX

I've been collecting copies of HGTV Magazine for so long that I now have an impressive set. I find many of the articles useful, but I especially like "One Last Question." Turning to it on the very last page always makes me smile.

-Jan Proctor, Meridian, ID

When my husband and I moved into a smallish, 1,200-square-foot apartment, I thought my days of serious decorating were over. Then I spotted an adorable beadboard backsplash in your January/ February issue ("Our New 170-Year-Old Kitchen") and just had to copy the look. We had a sheet of beadboard cut to fit our backsplash and even painted it blue like the one you featured.

—Barbara Tollefson, Minneapolis, MN

One of my favorite columns is

"Would You Let This in Your House?" I held on to October's edition—about a dated headboard—and used the instructions to make over a headboard that I recently purchased at a thrift store. It looks 100 times better thanks to you.

-Caitlyn Boultinghouse, Nowata, OK

I can't resist colorful kitchenware, so the January/February feature "50 Ways to Spend $100 (or a Lot Less!)" offered lots of eye candy. One item in particular that I'm looking forward to cooking with: the Lodge 6-quart Dutch oven in purple.

-Lyssa Snow, Tulsa, OK

From our issue to your home

Here's my take on an idea in your January/
February issue ("Smart-Spending Bloggers").
My father-in-law built the frame, then my husband spray-painted it Antique Brass by Rust-Oleum. Instead of stenciling inside,
I filled it with fabric from Hobby Lobby.

I love how the 1970s china cabinet turned out in January/ February's "Would You Let This in Your House?" I want it for my own living room! Any chance it's for sale? All jokes aside, thank you for an excellent, thought-provoking, inspirational magazine. I excitedly look forward to each issue.

-Dee Dee Clark, Metter, GA

It's so encouraging to see the projects fellow readers have tackled. Without your magazine, I never would have mustered the confidence to do a gallery wall in our living room with pictures of all shapes and sizes.

-Rebecca Vehr, Loveland, OH

I always look forward to reading

"The High/Low List." Shortly after flipping through your March issue, I was shopping in HomeGoods when I stumbled upon a glass-topped side table with golden metal legs. It was an even bigger steal than the low-priced model in the story. Thanks for the opportunity to play along. Keep up the good work!

-Jan Tierney, San Diego, CA

We recently went bold and painted our dining room Very Violet by Glidden. But we had no idea what to do with the space's dated built-in cabinetry. Nothing worked! Then I saw a dining room in your January/ February issue ("Grown-Up Pastels") and got inspired. I painted the cabinets bright white and the built-in counter black, then mounted mirrors to the back wall.

DEFINE THE SPACE WITH AN AREA RUG.

Choose a pattern or texture that adds dimension to the paint. Layering rugs gives even more depth.

CREATE A FOCAL POINT for the room, keeping your color palette in mind, with an item such as wall art, a mirror or a textural accent piece.

NEXT, CREATE A CONVERSATION AREA with a sofa. chairs and a coffee table. You'll likely have these for a long time, so go neutral.

super bad! 😮

help wanted how bad is it...

...to borrow or lend earbuds?

Sharing earbuds sounds grosser than it is. "Yes, bacteria live on ear skin, but they're mostly harmless," says Lisa Sturm, director of Infection Prevention and Epidemiology at the University of Michigan Health System. "Ears usually don't get viral infections from external factors like earbuds." The only times to avoid swapping: if you or the sharer has a skin infection (ear or otherwise) or a suppressed immune system from something like chemotherapy. If the buds look dirty or waxy, give them a quick cleaning with an alcohol wipe before sharing.

not so bad! 😌

...to not water flowers right after planting them?

If you want healthy, bloom-packed plants. don't deny them H₂O, especially when you first put them in the ground. When a bulb or seedling goes into dry dirt, any moisture that's inside the root ball will be sucked up by the surrounding soil. And bone-dry roots mean dead plants, says L.A. landscape designer Shirley Bovshow. "All freshly planted flowers need at least a month of regular watering to establish themselves," she says. Saturate the buds and the ground around a plant's roots right after planting, then check the soil every few days. If you dig your finger into the soil and it doesn't feel damp a few inches below the surface, water again.

...to toss bank statements without shredding them?

You could be throwing away your personal security. Identity thieves often go through trash as an easy way to steal information, says David Bach, vice chairman of Edelman Financial Services, a national financial planning firm. Luckily it's simple to keep your personal info secret. "Shred anything with your name, address, and any financial details before throwing it away," Bach advises. That includes bank statements, receipts, and credit card offers. "It's easy for someone to fill one out, then intercept your mail to get the credit card," says Bach. There's no need to spring for a high-tech shredder, though. Just rip statements into four pieces, then toss them in two trash cans.

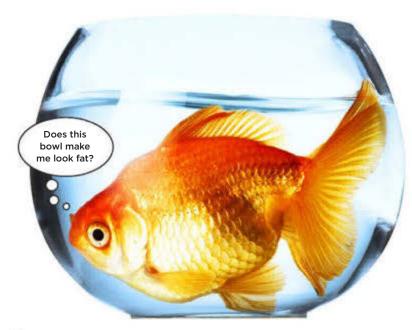

super bad! 😢

Don't worry too much about folding and stashing a drippy umbrella. "While it's generally not a good idea to trap water in anything you wrap up, umbrellas are made of water-repellent fabric that won't mold or mildew." savs Ann Headley, director of design and innovation at Totes. The only time you may run into trouble is if you're using a cheapie drugstore buy, as some have a metal frame that can rust. Spring for a plated steel, aluminum, or fiberglass frame instead. Giving your umbrella a quick shake after you come in from the rain can help it stay in shape too.

...to overfeed your pet fish?

Whatever food Goldie doesn't eat will end up drifting around her bowl or aquarium. If those leftovers aren't promptly cleaned out, when they decompose, they'll release toxins, such as ammonia, into the water. This can cause water quality to go south quickly, which could sicken or even kill your fish, says Bill Wymard, a marine biologist at Aquarium Adventure, an aquatic store in Columbus, OH. To ensure that you're giving your finned friend the right serving size, follow these steps two times a day: Over a few minutes, place tiny pinches of food into the bowl, pausing to make sure everything is eaten before adding more. The flakes shouldn't make it to the bottom of the bowl. If they do, you're dishing out too much.

...to pretreat a stain, then not wash it right away?

Yes, you want to act quickly to get a sauce splatter out of a shirt. But if you don't have time to wash or at least rinse it right after pretreating, hold off. When stain-blasting products are left on for longer than the time recommended on the label, they can discolor fabric, says Clorox senior scientist Mary Gagliardi, a.k.a. Dr. Laundry. That's why you should always follow the pretreater's guidelines—which typically advise letting the product sit for five to 10 minutes, then washing. If you want to get a jump-start on a stain and you're not near your washer, dab at the spot with liquid dish soap, then rinse.

pretty bad! 😢

Vern's to-do list

Even stars have chores! Check out HGTV designer Vern Yip's May agenda, full of tips you can use too.

- 1 Paint the front door a fresh color. To make sure the shade you pick doesn't clash with your siding, figure out if your home's exterior has a warm or cool undertone, and stick to the same family when you choose the color for your door. If you aren't sure which category your house falls into, an expert at the paint store can help you.
- 2 Shop beekman1802.com. I'm a big fan of the Beekman Boys, two guys who have a farm and store in New York plus an online shop that sells everything from furniture to soap. Most of the products are handcrafted by the men or fellow artisans, and they're excellent quality.
- 3 Lighten up my home fragrance. People don't often think about how a room smells, but it's important! During cooler months, I like strong, woodsy scents, but in spring, I go for hints of linen, lemongrass, lavender, and mint, like this mint moss candle ($28, thompsonferrier.com).
- 4 Fluff up throw pillows. If a decorative pillow doesn't come with a down feather insert, I buy one from a store like Crate & Barrel. The insert is comfier to lean against, and it makes the pillow look all the plusher.
- 5 Dust ceiling fans. Because they're up high, it's easy to let dust accumulate on blades. Before I turn any fans on for the season, I wipe them down with a microfiber duster. The Swiffer 360° Duster has an extendable handle—it's great because I don't need to climb a ladder to use it.

Some questions to consider when selecting a paint finish:

What is the condition of your surface?
Is washability important to you?
Are you painting walls, doors, trim, or furniture?

How much traffic does the room get?

with more details and recommendations on the right products for you. From planning how to clean up, we have you covered.

Here are top tips on how to use four popular paint finishes.

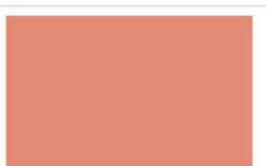

Gloss

This lustrous, durable finish can be scrubbed clean with ease and is great for any area that you would like to highlight, such as:

Wood Trim, Cabinets, Doors, and Furniture

Semi-Gloss

This durable finish reflects light for a bright, lustrous appearance. It is perfect for areas that are cleaned frequently, such as:

Kitchens, Bathrooms, Closet Doors, Trim, and Utility Areas

Satin

With its slight gloss, this finish offers the benefits of a richer look. It works best for high-traffic areas such as:

Children's Bedrooms, Hallways, and Family Rooms

Flat

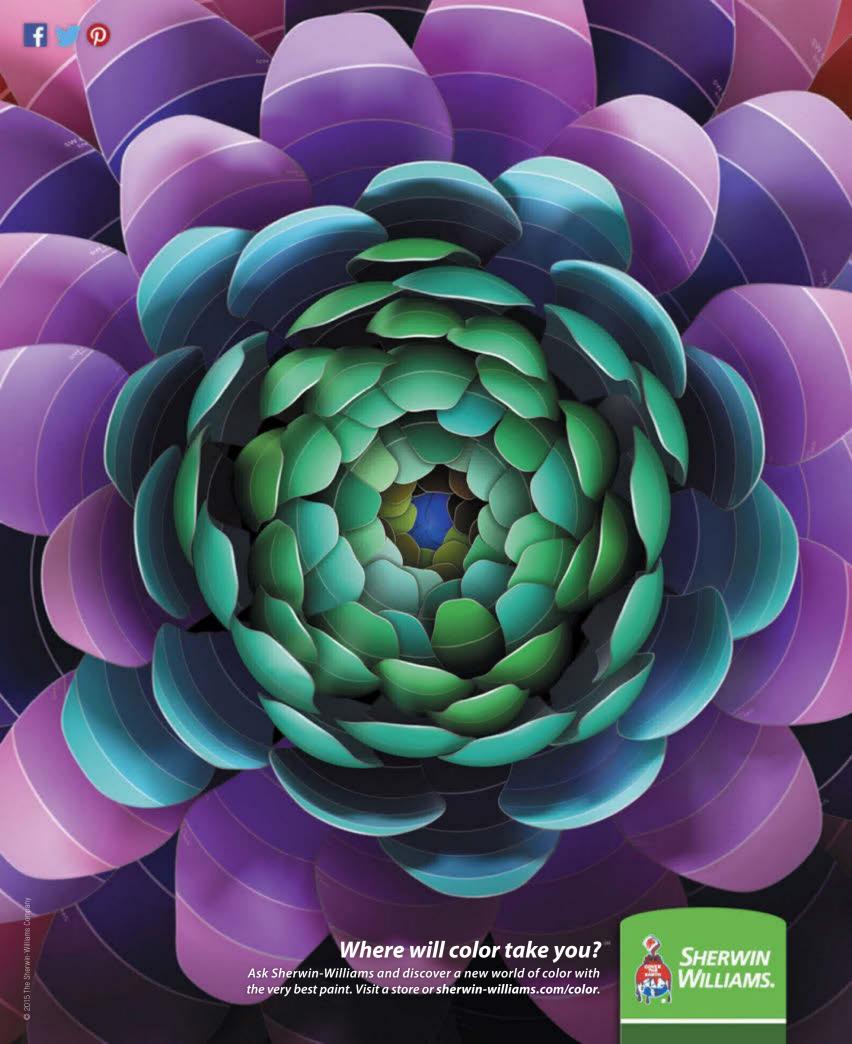

Its non-reflective appearance softens a room and helps hide surface imperfections, making walls look smooth. This finish is ideal for:

Dining Rooms, Living Rooms, Adult Bedrooms, and Ceilings

what's the difference

Finally! Clarification on some commonly confused household terms.

king (VS.) california king

Measuring 76 inches across, a king is the widest mattress you can buy. It's the exact same length as a queen-size mattress—80 inches from the top to the bottom.

At a whopping 84 inches long, a California king is the longest mattress on the market. But it offers less side-by-side room than a king—a California king is four inches narrower.

lily of the valley (VS.) lily

Known for its tiny, bellshaped white flowers, lily of the valley is a sweet-smelling plant that blooms in early spring. It works well as a cut flower and ground cover. A lily has showy—and often super-fragrant—blossoms with six petals. It flowers from June through August in a variety of colors, including white, red, orange, and yellow.

baking soda (VS.) baking powder

Baking soda, or sodium bicarbonate, is a top-notch leavening agent, cleaner, and deodorizer. If a recipe includes baking soda, it will also probably call for an acid, such as buttermilk or lemon juice, to activate the baking soda.

Baking powder is also a leavening agent, only it has the acid already built in. It's not as hardworking around the house, though. It can help cakes and biscuits rise, but it won't zap odors or unclog a drain.

brass (VS.) bronze

Brass, made of copper and zinc, is a soft metal that has a goldlike shine when polished. Big in the blingedout '80s, it's now usually seen with a duller, darker patina. It's popular for doorknobs, bed frames, and keys.

Harder than iron and resistant to corrosion, bronze is usually chemically treated to look aged. Made of copper and tin, it's pricier than brass and mainly used for industrial welding, pipe fittings, and door hardware.

if your kitchen sponge could talk

It would dish out all these hush-hush secrets.

Always leave me high and dry.

With crevices designed to retain moisture, cellulose sponges are ideal breeding grounds for germs—especially when they're put away wet in a dark undersink cabinet. To prevent bacteria buildup, wring out excess water, and pop the sponge in a countertop holder with plenty of air circulation.

My life span is really limited.

A sponge isn't meant to last forever. Most people eventually toss sponges when they notice mustiness or fraying, but the pros recommend discarding them every week-two weeks max—and starting fresh.

Here's why I feel clammy.

Ever notice a justopened cellulose sponge is already damp? That's because many are premoistened with sterile water. Without H₂O, the material shrivels and hardens-and looks unattractive on store shelves.

hard-core clean freak.

Disinfect sponges every other day: To sanitize, microwave a damp sponge on high for two minutes, run it through the dishwasher (make sure it isn't fraying or pieces can break off and clog the filter), or soak it overnight in 1 quart of water mixed with 3 tablespoons of chlorine bleach.

My party trick? Picking up pet hair.

If your upholstered furniture is covered in pet hair, swipe it with a dry sponge—the fur gets hoovered up like magic. Trash the hair, then wash the sponge with soap and hot water.

Want a paint that's safer for the environment and your family?

Only this can.™

Valspar reports that its yellow paint collection which encompasses everything from pale buttery shades to dark golden tones—is more popular than all other colors, including greens, blues, and even whites. Soft Duckling, shown here, falls in the middle of the spectrum.

MOST-ASKED QUESTION #1

Exactly how much paint should I buy?

A Estimate 1 gallon for every 350 square feet (slightly smaller than the size of the average family room), but you'll need almost double that if you're applying two coats-for example, if you're painting over a dark color and don't use primer. You'll also likely need an extra coat of paint for textured surfaces, such as brick. Another reason to get more than you think you'll need: The exact color of paint can vary if it's mixed at different times, so the shade you buy this Saturday might be slightly different from the same shade you buy a few days later when you realize you're short.

QDo I really need primer?

A Not if you're using a paintand-primer in one. But if you're buying regular old paint, you'll get better results if you apply a coat of primer before adding color. Primer, a light-color base coat, smooths and seals walls, blocking future stains and laying the foundation for a streak-free paint job, especially on raw wood, drywall, metal, and masonry. In fact, for these surfaces, many pros prefer primer over paint-and-primer in one because combo formulas can cost more and often require two coats anyway. Have primer tinted gray or the color of your topcoat if you're making drastic color changes-like going from red walls to light blue ones-to better hide the old hue.

STAFF TIP

"Grease and other stains can prevent paint from sticking to walls. So before painting, give the surface a quick wipedown with a rag dipped in soapy water or a mix of three parts water to one part bleach." -Jennifer Berno, style/home director

know your rollers

Swiping on a coat of color is easy when you have the right tool for the job.

A roller's nap is the length of its fibers. For most walls, a ³/₈-inch nap will produce the best results.

knit synthetic est for: Drywall or plas

Best for: Drywall or plaster
Nap: 3/8 inch

Because the fibers (polyester, nylon, or a blend of both) are knitted, this kind of roller—the classic go-to—applies paint without leaving lint behind on the wall.

Soft, tiny fibers create a smoother finish than a knit synthetic. This type is a little trickier to use—go over a spot too many times and it could pull paint off the wall.

MOST-ASKED QUESTION #3

Should I trash a paint roller or try to clean it?

A Most roller covers are cheap enough that you can treat them as disposables. But if you'd like to limit waste, you can clean them with a hand-powered brush-and-roller spinner (about $15 at home improvement and paint supply stores). Slip the paint-soaked cover onto the spinner's rotating head, and pump the handle; centrifugal force whirls off clingy paint. Rinse the roller in soapy water, then repeat a few times. To avoid splatters, do the spinning in a 5-gallon bucket outside or in the garage. Stand the roller up vertically to dry.

MOST-ASKED QUESTION #4

Should I use oil-based or latex paint?

Latex paint is the go-to standard for almost every interior and exterior household painting project, from kitchen cabinets and walls to siding and furniture. It dries fast, so you can do multiple coats in one day, and it cleans up easily with soapy water. Older formulations of latex were considered less durable than oil-based paint, but that's no longer the case. These days oilbased paint is being phased out by many consumer brands, since it's mainly used for specialty jobs most homeowners wouldn't tackle, like painting rusty surfaces that can't be cleaned.

According to Southern superstition, a blue porch ceiling protects homeowners from evil spirits and ghosts. Sherwin-Williams suggests these three (shown here, from top) particularly for porches: Hazel, Atmospheric, and Pool Blue.

STAFF TIP

• Will dark colors make a room feel smaller?

No. Despite what you may have heard, deep shades can actually help a tiny space feel more expansive. Since dark colors recede, they can make walls appear farther back than they actually are. And a dark shade applied to a ceiling can make it seem higher by creating an illusion of infinity—think of the vastness of the night sky.

what to do with leftovers

How to stash, trash, and upcycle excess paint.

store it

If you have more than a quart left, store the paint in its can in a cool, dry spot where temps won't dip below freezing. Wipe the can's rim, then cover its mouth with plastic wrap, tap down the lid with a hammer or mallet, and stow upright. If you have less than a quart, decant it into a small airtight container, like a glass jar. Label the lid with the date and the room(s) where you used it. Stored latex paint can last up to 10 years.

dump it

While oil paint is typically considered hazardous household waste and must be dropped off at a waste-handling facility, latex paint can often be left curbside. Before you get rid of it, mix in sand or kitty litter. Once it dries out, put the can with your trash or recycling. Just check your community's disposal guidelines—some areas want you to bring latex to drop-off sites, too. For a list of sites by state, go to paintcare.org.

donate it

Stuck with a gallon or more of paint you can't use? Try reaching out to an organization such as a community theater group, a high school drama department, or your nearest location of Habitat for Humanity's retail store, ReStore. Or place an ad on Craigslist or freecycle.org. If that doesn't get any takers, register with netpaint.org, which will notify you when a nearby group requests free paint.

MIXING MATERIALS

A style update brought to you by the Product Experts at FERGUSON

Mixing materials is all the craze in home décor right now, whether it's mixing old with new, masculine with feminine, or simply a mixture of colors.

KEY POINTS TO CONSIDER TO SUCCESSFULLY ACHIEVE A MIXED MATERIALS LOOK:

1. Pick a dominant metal, then contrast it. If most of the items in one room are finished in chrome, add in a brass light fixture.

by incorporating textured touches of wood, shells, stone, and glass to traditionally utilitarian items such as wall sconces and ceiling fans.

by incorporating a dramatic hue into a routinely overlooked area, such as the interior of a sink, cabinet space, or appliance.

4. Create a gender-unified space by showcasing masculine touches in a conventionally feminine area. For example, pair faucets and fixtures in matte black or dark finishes with delicate jewelry accents in lighting.

Throw out the old design rules that considered mixing materials a faux pas. The combination of different colors and finishes gives a room a richer, more interesting feel. Get mixing and create a space that is uniquely yours!

Orange Girtz

omfort was the top priority when Orange and Eial Girtz decorated the compact living room of their 1938 home in Port Washington, NY, seven years ago. Wanting the space to be a veg-out zone for TV watching and lounging, Orange crowded it with a supersized sofa, a mammoth chair-and-a-half, and a hulking coffee table. While the nap-ready pieces encouraged relaxing, they swallowed up the room-and occasionally guests. "I once had to save a pregnant friend who got trapped in the sofa," admits Orange. Eager to transition the space into a sophisticated entertaining spot (TV viewing is now done in the family room and basement), Orange was ready for smaller-scale furniture, patterns, and colors. The bold results have wowed visitors—"They can't believe it's the same room," she says-and made weekend socializing easier. "No one is falling into the couch anymore."

house tou quirky Hand-painted orange squiggles on the dining classic room walls Wedding china in a plantation-style cabinet 2 parts 1 part quirky A trellis print blown up to a huge scale A Georgia ranch house is all about the push-pull of opposites-just like the couple who lives here.

house tours

As you wind your way along the gently curving walkway that leads to Emily and Patrick McCarthy's 1980s ranch house in Savannah, GA, it's hard not to notice the front door. Painted a fiesta-ready orange red (Piñata by Benjamin Moore), it's an unsubtle hint that what's inside this home near the saltwater marshes isn't going to be typical. While Patrick's born-andbred-in-Savannah style is pretty much in sync with what's popular locally-"He's more straightlaced than I am," says Emily-she gravitates toward bold decor and was determined to bring some va-va-voom to the 2,700-square-foot house. To ensure her funloving exuberance and Patrick's buttoned-up traditionalism wouldn't turn into clashing chaos, she teamed with designer Kathryn Myrick to create a cohesive look out of family heirlooms, eclectic accessories, and break-therules pattern mixing. But Emily admits it wasn't always easy going. "I had to tone down the animal prints," she says. "It's a compromise, but that's what marriage is all about."

entryway

An oak console table from Patrick's family got Emily's approval with the addition of a custom linen skirt. "It wasn't our style," she says, "but he wanted to hang on to it." She paired it with a gold pineapple lamp from HomeGoods, a vintage tureen turned planter, and a sunburst mirror from local shop Clutter. The black-and-white rug is from One Kings Lane.

ylie and Ryan Durkin take their fondness for vintage stuff seriously. Nearly everything in their 1950 Phoenix, AZ, home-down to the dishes—is older than the couple themselves. Their favorite pieces are mid-century modern, a style they love so much, they opened a furniture shop devoted to the era called Modern Manor. "The quality and the simple, geometric shapes can't be matched," says Ryan, who often cherry-picks the store's inventory for one-of-a-kind pieces he can use at home. As a result, the Durkins' four-bedroom place-which they bought and renovated in 2012-features a constantly rotating collection of droolworthy, history-packed finds, from iconic bucket chairs designed by Eames to an antique cabinet with dozens of little built-in cubbies. "We pretty much cringe if we have to buy something that's brand-new," says Ryan. Adds Kylie, "Everything in this house has a story behind it."

living room

The house's original etched concrete walls, exposed beams, and copper-hooded fireplace give it a distinctly retro look. Ryan had the 1980s sofa reupholstered in tufted leather and was so happy with it, he had an ottoman built to match. To balance out such bulky pieces, he added a leggy 1960s mosaic-top coffee table. One of the couple's favorite vintage-market finds is the road sign from when Phoenix had just 700,000 residents (today it's more than double that). The shaggy rug is from HomeGoods, one of the few spots where the couple likes to buy new things.

People always asks us about the retro wall panels in Sawyer's room. They look really cool and aren't nearly as expensive as you'd think.

-Ryan

nursery

Not ones to go for matching baby-furniture sets, the Durkins outfitted River's bedroom with a 1960s teak dresser and an Eero Saarinen-designed Womb chair with a matching footstool. The teepee—which typically serves as big brother Sawyer's hiding spot—was snagged at an estate sale.

sawyer's room

For a bit of space age-inspired playfulness, the Durkins lined a nook with "wall flats," inexpensive 3-D panels from inhabitliving.com. A daybed from Monte Design and a vintage campaign dresser in crisp white look grown-up enough that Kylie expects Sawyer will be able to use them for the next decade. The swirly rug is from Marshalls.

tips for buying vintage

The Durkins' best hints, gleaned from years in the biz.

- Get your info from estate sales and auction houses. To learn how to identify an authentic mid-century-modern piece, don't just surf the Web for tips. Visit estate sales to find real-life examples you can study. Or supplement online research with catalogs from auction houses known for this style of furniture, such as Wright (wright20.com) and Rago (ragoarts.com).
- Dinged wood is OK; cracked Formica is not. You can usually sand down nicks in wood or even lacquer over worn wood veneer. However, Formica (another popular mid-century-modern material) is pricey to repair. It's also difficult to paint over, so avoid it if it's in rough condition.
- Don't pay full price. While the prices at the start of an estate sale are usually firm, you can often negotiate by the end of the day. Shopping at an antiques mall or a vintage store? Almost all sellers will automatically drop the price by 10% if you ask.

sabrina's coffee cake muffins

MAKES 18 MUFFINS

FOR THE STREUSEL

- ½ cup all-purpose flour
- ½ cup light brown sugar
- 5 tablespoons unsalted butter, cold, cut into small pieces
- 2 tablespoons Café Bustelo instant coffee
- ½ cup walnuts, coarsely chopped

FOR THE MUFFINS

- 2½ cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon Café Bustelo instant coffee
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 5 tablespoons unsalted butter, at room temperature
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 2 large eggs
- $\frac{1}{3}$ cup vegetable oil
- 1 cup sour cream

FOR THE GLAZE

- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- ¼ teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1-2 tablespoons water or milk

- Preheat the oven to 350°F, and line muffin tins with 18 paper baking cups.
- Make the streusel: Combine the flour, brown sugar, butter, and instant coffee in a medium bowl. Using your fingers or a fork, work the butter into the flour mixture until coarse crumbs form. Stir in walnuts until evenly distributed: set aside.
- Make the muffins: Whisk the flour, instant coffee, baking powder, baking soda, and salt in a separate bowl; set aside.
- Beat the butter and sugar in a large bowl with a mixer until fluffy, about 1 minute. Beat in the eggs one at a time, mixing well, then beat in the vegetable oil and sour cream until combined. Add the muffin flour mixture, and beat until just incorporated.
- Divide the batter among the prepared baking cups, filling each one about halfway. Add 1 tablespoon streusel to each, then cover with the remaining muffin batter. Sprinkle the tops with the remaining streusel. Bake until a toothpick inserted into the centers comes out clean, 20 to 25 minutes. Let cool in the tins for 5 minutes, then transfer the muffins to a rack to cool completely.
- Make the glaze: Whisk confectioners' sugar and vanilla extract in a medium bowl. Add water or milk and whisk until smooth. Drizzle over cooled muffins and let sit for at least 1 hour to set.
- Place each muffin in a cupcake wrapper before serving.

"SERIOUSLY?"

"GOOD LUCK WITH THAT"

This early summer crop comes in green, yellow, and purple. Wait until temps reach 60°F to plant. Then place the seeds six inches apart, in rows about two feet apart. Once flowers appear, check for beans daily—they're most tender when no thicker than a pencil. Bonus: They don't usually have pest problems.

peppers

Both sweet bell peppers and hot chile peppers are fairly low-fuss, as long as you plant seedlings in summer in soil boosted with composted manure. Cover with black plastic mulch, and water when soil is dry one to two inches below the surface. If plants get topheavy with fruit, tie the main stems to stakes.

carrots

Carrots take some babying. In late spring turn over the top foot of soil, then sow the tiny seeds one to two inches apart in rows. Cover with a thin layer of soil, and keep damp until they sprout, about two to three weeks. Pull from the ground when the foliage looks lush and the tops of the roots poke above the soil.

advanced >

beets

For the biggest beets, plant seeds in late spring in deeply dug soil, and vigilantly remove weeds, as beets don't like competition. Each seed should produce a couple of seedlings. When leaves are a few inches tall, pull some seedlings so there are two to four inches between plants. Harvest them at any size.

broccoli

Broccoli isn't too hard to grow if you plant a quick-to-mature variety in cool, sunny weather. Plant seedlings 18 inches apart, and fertilize every few weeks. Harvest when the main head is five to seven inches across. To deter pests, spray with an organic pesticide or top with fabric row cover (sheets of polypropylene).

kale

Easy to grow from seed and tolerant of the cold, kale sprouts in a few days. In cool spring soil, plant seeds in broad swaths. Snip baby leaves for salads once they're three to four inches long. Harvest mature leaves—which are best for cooking—when they're 10 to 12 inches long, starting with those lowest on the stalk.

summer squash

These quick growers include pattypan squash and zucchini. Plant the seeds in warm soil with full sun, leaving three square feet per plant. Water deeply once a week, but don't wet the leaves, which can cause powdery mildew. You should see squash in about six weeks. Pick them daily—smaller squash taste sweeter.

← intermediate cucumbers

Heat-loving cukes grow quickly on short vines that can be left to spread on mulched soil, but they do best trained up a trellis or attached to a fence. Grow them from seeds or seedlings starting in summer, and water the roots deeply one to two times a week. Don't wet the leaves, which can cause powdery mildew.

cherry tomatoes

The easiest tomatoes to grow, these come in dwarf varieties for pots; larger varieties will need staking in the garden. Plant seedlings in soil mixed with composted manure and organic fertilizer, then cover with black plastic mulch. Water at the roots and harvest once the fruits turn red.

brussels sprouts

Brussels sprouts take 100 days to mature, but if you have patience, you'll get fresh veggies in late fall. Plant seedlings two feet apart in compost-enriched soil in late spring. Tie the thick stalks to wooden stakes in mid-summer. Sprouts can attract pests, so they benefit from fabric row cover or spraying.

asparagus

While you won't get many spears the first year or two, you'll enjoy plenty in year three and beyond. Plant roots, called crowns, with fertilizer in a 12-inch-deep trench in a sunny spot. Mulch beds with hay and keep them weeded and watered. You'll have asparagus for four to eight weeks in early spring.

SCIENTIFIC NAME

Every plant has a scientific name. The first part is Latin and usually italicized on the tag. It describes the genus, or group, the plant belongs to and its species. The scientific name also includes the cultivar, which is in single quote marks and classifies the plant even further in terms of color and leaf and petal shape.

MATURE HEIGHT & SPREAD

This is the maximum height and width the plant is likely to reach when fully grown.

SUN EXPOSURE

You'll see this info written out or as an icon. When a tag indicates a plant needs full sun, it should get at least six hours of direct sunlight per day. Partial sun/shade, shown here, means it needs about half that amount. If a tag says a plant needs full shade, it should get less than three hours of sun per day.

COMMON NAME

This is what the plant is generally called. If you want a certain color or shape, you'll need more specifics.

Begonia

Begonia x hiemalis 'Netja Dark'

HEIGHT: 12-18 inches SPREAD: 12-15 inches

BLOOM SEASON: Spring-fall

ZONE: 10-11

An easy-care flower that blooms all season. Plant in rich, well-draining soil in containers or landscapes; can also be grown indoors.

HARDINESS ZONE

These numbers let you know the region a plant grows best in. Zones are established by the U.S. Department of Agriculture based on temperatures. You can still grow plants that aren't in your hardiness zone, but you'll have to treat them as annuals. To find your zone, go to garden.org/zipzone.

WATER NEEDS & ANIMAL RESISTANCE

If a tag doesn't say how often to water the plant, look for the number of raindrops. One means you should let soil dry out between waterings. Two means soil should be dry an inch below the surface. Three means you should keep soil moist constantly. An icon with a crossed-out rabbit or deer, like this one, means that animal won't nibble the plant.
